

The Man a Printer Loves.
There is a man the printer loves.
And he is wondrous wise;
When'er he writes the printer man,
He doth it all his life.
And when he doth it all of them,
With care and diligence,
He punctuates each paragraph,
And crosses all his i's.
Upon one side alone he writes,
And never looks his leaves;
And from the man of ink and pen,
And mark "used" in his eyes.
And when a question he doth ask—
Taught wisely he hath been—
He doth the goodly penny stamps
For postage back put in.
He gives the place from which he writes—
His address the printer needs—
And plainly writes his honored name,
So he that runneth reads.
Here reads, reviews, reads corrects,
And re-writes all again;
And keeps one copy safe,
And sends one to the printer man.
So let all those who long to write
With let black ink and paper white,
Do just the best they can:
And then the printer man shall know
And bless them as his friends
All through life journey as they go,
Until that journey ends.

A TRIP TO HIS OLD HOME.

Rev. C. V. Barnes Comes Back to the Spot of His Nativity—Everything is Changed—The Home is Gone—The Fountain is dry—Many Familiar Faces are no Longer Seen—Other Surviving Friends are Joyfully Met—Gave a Yarn Talk.
Mr. Editor—Having been lately with the opportunity of visiting my old home and church (Sharon) on Calhoun's creek in Abbeville county, I thought I would place at your disposal a brief account of my trip. On Saturday morning, the 8th inst., I passed by way of Barnette's bridge and Warrenton, down Little River over rough and zigzag roads to Sharon church, where services were announced for that day. Arriving before time, I was met by the pastor, Mr. D. L. Edwards, and many relatives and friends who had been buried in the cemetery near by. As I passed from tomb to tomb and read the epitaphs of so many whom I once knew and with whom I was so intimately associated in my youthful days, I could scarcely restrain or erasing tears. The following are some of the families represented there: Hills, Barnes, Zimmermann, Penneys, Parsleys, Rameys, Lockridges, Hammonds, Wardens, D. L. Edwards, Manns, McNeils, Johnsons, Brooks, with many others I do not now call to mind. And many many graves of those who were likely known to only a few of the older citizens. It would be too late for their identification. This cemetery is enclosed by wire and is a model of cleanliness and beauty. During the present year 1894, the progressive good people of that community have built a new, large and commodious church, just in rear of the old one. With this new and somewhat larger structure, and the large kept grounds around, the place seems more attractive than ever before. It would be difficult to find a more beautiful church in the vicinity. The old church, which was a humble log structure which in time gave place to a more pretentious framed house. After the lapse of fifty or sixty years, this was removed the present year for the new building. Rev. W. H. Atrial, the present pastor, is the successor of quite a number of ministers who have served that church, and who, like all, or most of his predecessors, is in favor with the people. In the afternoon, Saturday, I visited the old homestead, the exact spot of my nativity; but the dwelling and the old buildings having been long since removed, and the land put under cultivation, there was nothing left to mark the place except a few rocks which stood one of the chimneys. I would not at all have recognized the place if I had not known where it was. The old place was a spring my father dug out of a rock, which supplied us with water. There were few wells in those days, and the water was drawn over by hand, and covered with growing vegetation, it could not be found. So I missed the very great pleasure I anticipated in taking another drink of water out of the old family spring, one that had been carried over by my father's own hands. There are some small marks of the old place, but of much interest to me, and I doubt not would be to many others under like circumstances. At our camp-meeting there, a man, opposed his wife taking interest in the meeting, went under the old oaks, and view the many objects that so often greeted your vision in childhood days. "There is no place like home," and a native home at that. Sunday morning I worshiped again with the congregation at Sharon, and met a goodly number of my old friends. But a large majority of the older citizens have either died or moved away. Comparatively few but few familiar faces.

Greenwood Items.

Greenwood, S. C., Oct. 23, 1894.
Mr. E. L. Oldham, formerly of Greenwood, is in the western part of the State teaching penmanship.
Rev. W. T. Matthews, of Greenwood, has received a call from both the Presbyterian church of Pensacola, Fla., and Anderson, S. C. Mr. W. A. Harrelson was quite ill again last week.
Miss Leona Blake, of Abbeville, was recently the guest of her brother, Mr. Ramsey Blake.
Capt. Frank Hodges, one of our esteemed citizens, died here last week after a protracted illness. He was a member of the Abbeville church, and had many friends in various parts of the State.
Miss Cora Muse, of Verdery, has been elected to teach the Prosperity school near Sal-ah. She is an energetic young lady of sterling worth and makes a first class teacher. The Greenwood Oil Mill and Ginery is still doing a fine business.
The Greenwood Graded School has been closed because of the prevalence of scarlet fever in town.
The eldest child of Mr. Warren Strawhorn, died last week.
Mr. T. Arthur Williams has erected a store house just outside of the corporate limits of the city, and will deal in general merchandise.
Mr. Walter W. Tribble, the eighteen year old son of C. T. Tribble of Clinton, has carved with his pocket knife a walking stick made of hickory on which an alligator, a snake, a squirrel, rabbit and a snake are carved. The work is neat.
County Treasurer, J. R. Blake, Jr., will arrive at Greenwood Thursday, November 8th, up train from Ninety-Six, and will leave next day at 6 p. m.
The Greenwood Journal is gaining favor with our people.
